Taxpayer protests the imposition of additional adjusted gross income.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Taxpayer is an Indiana company doing business in Indiana and outside of Indiana. Taxpayer, based on its nexus with Indiana, elected to file its Indiana corporate income tax returns and did not file with its affiliates, reporting its Indiana income tax for the years ending September 30, 2010, September 30, 2011, and September 30, 2012. The Indiana Department of Revenue ("Department") audited Taxpayer's business records for those tax years. Pursuant to the audit, the Department found that Taxpayer did not correctly report its income. The Department's audit thus made adjustments to the sales factor in Taxpayer's returns. The audit adjustments resulted in additional Indiana income for the tax years ending September 30, 2011, and September 30, 2012. The Department thus assessed additional income tax for the tax years ending September 30, 2011, and September 30, 2012 ("Tax Years at Issue").

Taxpayer protested the Department's proposed assessments of additional income tax. Specifically, Taxpayer protests the Department's assessments pertaining to its sales to California ("California Sales") for the Tax Years at Issue. A hearing was held. This Letter of Findings ensues. Additional facts will be provided as necessary.

I. Adjusted Gross Income Tax - Throwback Sales.

DISCUSSION

The Department's audit found that Taxpayer was not subject to income tax in various states, but it failed to include its sales to those states in computing the sales numerator of its Indiana returns for the Tax Years at Issue. Specifically, the Department's audit determined that Taxpayer did not have nexus with various states and its income derived from sales to those states were not subject to tax in those states under P.L.86-272. The audit thus applied the Indiana throwback rule, adjusting the sales factor, which resulted in additional Indiana income for the Tax Years at Issue. As a result, the audit imposed additional income tax for the Tax Years at Issue.

Taxpayer disagrees with the Department's adjustments related to its California Sales for the Tax Years at Issue. Taxpayer, referencing its California Water's Edge returns with its affiliates, asserts that the throwback rule does not apply to its California Sales because (1) its business activities in California were beyond solicitation, and (2) it had tangible property in California.

As a threshold issue, all tax assessments are prima facie evidence that the Department's claim for the unpaid tax is valid; the taxpayer bears the burden of proving that any assessment is incorrect. IC § 6-8.1-5-1(c); Lafayette Square Amoco, Inc. v. Indiana Dep't of State Revenue, 867 N.E.2d 289, 292 (Ind. Tax Ct. 2007); Indiana Dep't of State Revenue v. Rent-A-Center East, Inc., 963 N.E.2d 463, 466 (Ind. 2012). Thus, the taxpayer is required to provide documentation explaining and supporting its challenge that the Department's assessment is wrong. Poorly developed and non-cogent arguments are subject to waiver. Scopelite v. Indiana Dep't of Local Gov't Fin., 939 N.E.2d 1138, 1145 (Ind. Tax Ct. 2010); Wendt LLP v. Indiana Dep't of State Revenue, 977 N.E.2d 480, 486 n.9 (Ind. Tax Ct. 2012).

"Indiana imposes a tax on every corporation's adjusted gross income derived from sources within Indiana. [IC § 6-3-2-1(b).] In cases where a corporation derives business income from sources both within and without Indiana, the 'adjusted gross income derived from sources within the state of Indiana' is determined by an apportionment formula." Sherwin-Williams Co. v. Indiana Dep't. of State Revenue, 673 N.E.2d 849, 851 (Ind. Tax Ct. 1996). That formula operates by multiplying taxpayer's total business income by a fraction composed of a property factor, a payroll factor, and a sales factor. IC § 6-3-2-2(b). The "sales factor" consists of a fraction, "the numerator of which is the total sales of the taxpayer in [Indiana] during the taxable year, and the denominator of which is the total sales of the taxpayer everywhere during the taxable year." IC § 6-3-2-2(e).

The basic rule for calculating the sales factor is found at IC § 6-3-2-2. IC § 6-3-2-2(e) provides that "[s]ales of tangible personal property are in this state if . . . (2) the property is shipped from an office, a store, a warehouse, a factory, or other place of storage in this state and . . . (B) the taxpayer is not taxable in the state of the purchaser." IC § 6-3-2-2(n) provides that "[f]or purposes of allocation and apportionment of income under this article, a taxpayer is taxable in another state if: (1) in that state the taxpayer is subject to a net income tax, a franchise tax measured by net income, a franchise tax for the privilege of doing business, or a corporate stock tax; or (2) that state has jurisdiction to subject the taxpayer to a net income tax regardless of whether, in fact, the state does or does not." Therefore, in order to properly attribute income to a foreign state, a taxpayer must show that one of the taxes listed in IC § 6-3-2-2(n)(1) has been levied against him or that the state has the jurisdiction to impose a net income tax regardless of "whether, in fact, the state does or does not." Id.

45 IAC 3.1-1-53 explains:

Gross receipts from the sales of tangible personal property (except sales to the United States Government-See Regulation 6-3-2-2(e)(050) [45 IAC 3.1-1-54]) are in this state: (a) if the property is delivered or shipped to a purchaser within this state regardless of the F.O.B. point or other conditions of sales; or (b) if the property is shipped from an office, store, factory, or other place of storage in this state, and the taxpayer is not taxable in the state of the purchaser. See Regulation 6-3-2-2(n)(010) [45 IAC 3.1-1-64].

Examples:

(5) If the taxpayer is not taxable in the state of the purchaser, the sale is attributed to this state if the property is shipped from an office, store, warehouse, factory, or other place of storage in this state. Such sale is termed a "Throwback" sale. Example: The taxpayer has its head office and factory in State A. It maintains a branch office and inventory in Indiana. Taxpayer's only activity in State B is the solicitation of orders by a resident salesman. All orders by the State B salesman are sent to the branch office in Indiana for approval and are filled by shipment from the inventory in Indiana. Since the taxpayer is immune under P.L.86-272 from tax in State B, all sales of merchandise to purchasers in State B are attributed to Indiana, the state from which the merchandise was shipped.

(Emphasis added).

45 IAC 3.1-1-38 provides:

For apportionment purposes, a taxpayer is "doing business" in a state if it operates a business enterprise or activity in such state including, but not limited to:

- (1) Maintenance of an office or other place of business in the state
- (2) Maintenance of an inventory of merchandise or material for sale distribution, or manufacture, or consigned goods
- (3) Sale or distribution of merchandise to customers in the state directly from company-owned or operated vehicles where title to the goods passes at the time of sale or distribution
- (4) Rendering services to customers in the state
- (5) Ownership, rental or operation of a business or of property (real or personal) in the state
- (6) Acceptance of orders in the state
- (7) Any other act in such state which exceeds the mere solicitation of orders so as to give the state nexus under P.L.86-272 to tax its net income.

As stated in Regulation 6-3-2-2(b)(010) [45 IAC 3.1-1-37], corporations doing business in Indiana as well as other states are subject to the allocation and apportionment provisions of IC 6-3-2-2\(b\)-\(n\). (Emphasis added).

45 IAC 3.1-1-64 further illustrates:

A corporation is "taxable in another state" under the Act when such state has jurisdiction to subject it to a net income tax. This test applies if the taxpayer's business activities are sufficient to give the state jurisdiction to impose a net income tax under the Constitution and statutes of the United States. Jurisdiction to tax is not present where the state is prohibited from imposing the tax by reason of the provision of Public Law 86-272, 15 U.S.C.A. §381-385. In the case of any "State," as defined in IC 6-3-1-25, other than a state of the United States or political subdivision of such state, the determination of whether such "state" has jurisdiction to subject the taxpayer to a net income tax shall be made by application of the jurisdictional standards applicable to that state of the United States. If jurisdiction to tax is otherwise present, such "state" is not considered as being without jurisdiction to tax by reason of the provisions of a treaty between that state and the United States.

Example:

Corporation X is actively engaged in manufacturing farm equipment in State A and foreign country B. Both State A and foreign country B impose a net income tax but foreign country B exempts corporations engaged in manufacturing farm equipment. Corporation X is subject to the jurisdiction of State A and foreign country B.

Taxpayers are not subject to throwback on sales into states in which they are taxable under this regulation [45 IAC 3.1-1-64]. See Regulation 6-3-2-2(e)(040) [45 IAC 3.1-1-53].

(Emphasis added).

15 U.S.C. § 381(a), which establishes minimum standards for a state to impose tax, provides:

No State, or political subdivision thereof, shall have power to impose, for any taxable year ending after September 14, 1959, a net income tax on the income derived within such State by any person from interstate commerce if the only business activities within such State by or on behalf of such person during such taxable year are either, or both, of the following:

- (1) the solicitation of orders by such person, or his representative, in such State for sales of tangible personal property, which orders are sent outside the State for approval or rejection, and, if approved, are filled by shipment or delivery from a point outside the State; and
- (2) the solicitation of orders by such person, or his representative, in such State in the name of or for the benefit of a prospective customer of such person, if orders by such customer to such person to enable such customer to fill orders resulting from such solicitation are orders described in paragraph (1).

15 U.S.C. § 381(c) further states:

For purposes of subsection (a) of this section, a person shall not be considered to have engaged in business activities within a State during any taxable year merely by reason of sales in such State, or the solicitation of orders for sales in such State, of tangible personal property on behalf of such person by one or more independent contractors, or by reason of the maintenance, of an office in such State by one or more independent contractors whose activities on behalf of such person in such State consist solely of making sales, or soliciting orders for sales, of tangible personal property.

Accordingly, in every transaction, at least one state has the authority to impose tax on income derived from the sale of tangible personal property. A state could impose tax on a taxpayer if its activity within the state exceeds "solicitation of orders."

The court in Indiana Dep't of State Revenue v. Kimberly-Clark Corp., 416 N.E.2d 1264 (Ind. 1981), found that the nonresident taxpayer did not exceed solicitation of orders for sales in Indiana because it only employed several salesmen who lived in Indiana to perform activities such as, checking inventories, checking shelf facings, and explaining products. Id. at 1266. The Kimberly-Clark court stated that "each case must be judged upon its own merits, with particular emphasis placed upon the totality of a corporation's activities within a state." Id. at 1268. The Kimberly-Clark court held that solicitation of orders for sales includes "sundry activities so long as those activities (are) closely related to the eventual sale of a product." Id. (Internal citation omitted). The Kimberly-Clark court concluded that the taxpayer's activities in Indiana were "inextricably related to solicitation" or as "acts of courtesy," and, therefore, the taxpayer was not taxable in Indiana. Id.

The U.S. Supreme Court refined the "mere solicitation" standard in Wisconsin Dep't. of Revenue v. William Wrigley, Jr., Co., 505 U.S. 214 (1992). In Wrigley, the taxpayer, a manufacturer of chewing gum, claimed that P.L. 86-272 prohibits Wisconsin from taxing its income because (1) it did not have any office (or real estate) in Wisconsin and (2) its business activities in Wisconsin were within the scope of solicitation of orders and were de minimis. Id. at 235. The Court disagreed and, in relevant part, stated:

We proceed, therefore, to describe what we think the proper standard to be. Once it is acknowledged, as we have concluded it must be, that "solicitation of orders" covers more than what is strictly essential to making requests for purchases, the next (and perhaps the only other) clear line is the one between those activities that are entirely ancillary to requests for purchases—those that serve no independent business function apart from their connection to the soliciting of orders—and those activities that the company would have reason to engage in anyway but chooses to allocate to its in-state sales force. Providing a car and a stock of free samples to salesmen is part of the "solicitation of orders," because the only reason to do it is to facilitate requests for purchases. Contrariwise, employing salesmen to repair or service the company's products is not part of the "solicitation of orders," since there is good reason to get that done whether or not the company has a sales force. Repair and servicing may help to increase purchases; but it is not ancillary to requesting purchases, and cannot be converted into "solicitation" by merely being assigned to salesmen.

Id. at 228-29. (Emphasis in original) (Internal citation omitted).

The Court further explained:

By contrast, Wrigley's in-state recruitment, training, and evaluation of sales representatives and its use of hotels and homes for sales-related meetings served no purpose apart from their role in facilitating solicitation. The same must be said of the instances in which Wrigley's regional sales manager contacted the Chicago office about "rather nasty" credit disputes involving important accounts in order to "get the account and [Wrigley's] credit department communicating." It hardly appears likely that this mediating function between the customer and the central office would have been performed by some other employee – some company ombudsman, so to speak – if the on-location sales staff did not exist. The purpose of the activity, in other words, was to ingratiate the salesman with the customer, thereby facilitating requests for purchases.

Finally, Wrigley argues that the various nonimmune activities, considered singly or together, are de minimis. In particular, Wrigley emphasizes that the gum sales through "agency stock checks" accounted for only 0.00007 [percent] of Wrigley's annual Wisconsin sales, and in absolute terms amounted to only several hundred dollars a year. We need not decide whether any of the nonimmune activities was de minimis in isolation; taken together, they clearly are not. Wrigley's sales representatives exchanged stale gum, as a matter of regular company policy, on a continuing basis, and Wrigley maintained a stock of gum worth several thousand dollars in the State for this purpose, as well as for the less frequently pursued (but equally unprotected) purpose of selling gum through "agency stock checks." Although the relative magnitude of these activities was not large compared to Wrigley's other operations in Wisconsin, we have little difficulty concluding that they constituted a nontrivial additional connection with the State. Because Wrigley's business activities within Wisconsin were not limited to those specified in § 381, the prohibition on net-income taxation contained in that provision was inapplicable.

Id. at 234-5.

Ruling in favor of Wisconsin, the Court thus held that the taxpayer in Wrigley was subject to Wisconsin's net income tax because its business activities in Wisconsin exceeded P.L. 86-272's protection. Id. at 235.

Thus, following the Wrigley decision, an Indiana company's income derived from its sales to other states is thrown back to Indiana for income tax purposes when the Indiana company's business activities in those states are protected and are not taxable pursuant to P.L. 86-272.

In this instance, Taxpayer, an Indiana company, claims that it employed a salesperson, living in California and working from home or at the customer's locations, to perform specialized business activities, including gathering information of the target market and analyzing that target market. Referencing its internal documentation, Taxpayer asserts that, although both parties executed an independent contractor agreement during the Tax Years at Issue, this salesperson has been treated as an employee, not an independent contractor. Taxpayer also asserts that it provided this salesperson certain tangible personal property, including a laptop, a cell phone, and accessories. Taxpayer thus believes that it had tangible property in California, establishing the requirement of "doing business" in California. Thus, Taxpayer argues that its California sales should not have been thrown back to Indiana because its activities in California, through this salesperson, were beyond solicitation and exceeded the P.L. 86-272's protection. To support its protest, in addition to its California tax filings for the Tax Years at Issue and correspondence, Taxpayer also submitted "Independent Contractor Agreement and Schedule A."

Upon review, however, the Department's is not able to agree that Taxpayer's business activities in California were beyond solicitation. First, Taxpayer's documentation fails to establish that it was "doing business" in California for the Tax Years at Issue. Specifically, Taxpayer's documentation shows that it elected to file the California returns with its affiliates as a group for the Tax Years at Issue, but it stated, in the California returns, that it was not doing business. Taxpayer's supporting documentation further demonstrates that it engaged a salesperson working from home, using Taxpayer's laptop and cell phone, to facilitate solicitation of orders. The Schedule A, in relevant part, states:

The Contractor will perform the following duties -

1. Business Development which will primarily consist of following up all sales quotation issued by [Taxpayer]. All quotes to be followed up no later than 10 working days after the date of issue.
2. Gathering and documenting competitive data obtained during the quote follow up activities.
3. Preparation of quotations by exception as and when requested to do so by [Taxpayer].
4. Any other duties reasonably requested by [Taxpayer] and agreed to by the Contractor.

(Emphasis added).

Thus, in this case, Taxpayer engaged a salesperson, who lives in California, using Taxpayer's laptop to perform activities, including preparing quotations, following up quotation, and gathering data during the quote follow-up. All the customers' orders were required to be approved by Taxpayer's Indiana office. Thus, the nature of the salesperson's activities in California was closely related to the eventual sale of a product. Regardless of whether the salesperson was an employee or an independent contractor, Taxpayer's supporting documentation shows that its business activities in California did not go beyond solicitation pursuant to the above mentioned statutes, regulations, and case law.

Given the totality of the circumstances, in the absence of other supporting documentation, the Department is not able to agree that Taxpayer has met its burden of proof demonstrating that the Department assessments are wrong.
